What is Gaelscolaíocht Éireann?

Gaelscolaíocht Éireann (GSÉ) is a new project established in August 2006, with funding from the European Union to improve cross-border public sector cooperation and service delivery in the targeted areas of the six border counties and the six counties in the north of Ireland. GSÉ recognises the different policy contexts of Irish-medium education on both sides of the border.

This project seeks to bring the key representative bodies with responsibilities for Irish medium education together to:

- inform and exchange information on policy and practice through a number of briefings and study visits.
- encourage the development of good models of strategic service delivery by learning from each other and engaging with experts from other counties involved in similar processes, particularly Wales and Scotland.
- enhance local service delivery by engaging regional and local stakeholders in the process.

What is the structure of Gaelscolaíocht Éireann?

The project received funding under the Special European Union Programming Body (SEUBP) Measure 5.2 Improving Cross-Border Public Sector Cooperation. It will function as a cross-border Steering Committee with representatives from the key organisations with responsibilities for Irish medium education. It will also convene a cross-border Forum for all organisations involved with Irish medium education to encourage greater cross-border exchange of information and on models of good practice.
